From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  o Chris Cameron, Scientist and Climate Advisor, CLEAR Environmental, clearenvironmental.org, http://clearenvironmental.org/, working and living on traditional WŚÁNEĆ territory
From Sarah Johnson to Host and Panelists:
  o Governor Inslee - how are governors across America leveraging their leadership positions to demand equitable climate education legislation for ALL American people? I would imagine if governors come together from across the country there is collective power to demand change through federal climate change education legislation.
From Christy Merrick to Everyone:
  o Thank you Gov Inslee for your state's leadership in outdoor learning, including for preschoolers!
From Lisa Yeager to Everyone:
  o No exploding mountains - kudos! :)
So great to have gotten 20% of students outside! Can you say more about the support (or challenges) to the support in the WA legislature and prospects of getting to 100% of the students?

- From Elizabeth Schmitz to Everyone:
  - State of Play report by the Aspen Institute points to lack of equity to outdoor spaces in King County/Seattle: https://www.aspenprojectplay.org/communities/seattle-king-county

- From Eileen Boekestein to Host and Panelists:
  - I would love to hear more about how the state of WA was able to get that appropriation for every student having an outdoor experience in place. What an amazing resource for educators there!

- From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  - One of the several WA efforts is www.climetime, another is the emerging Climate Teacher Education Collective (preservice teacher Ed)

- From Hannah Cooke to Everyone:
  - We also need to decolonize our framing of the environment being “out there” away from the inner city. We need to remember that the carbon and water cycles still exist in urban areas.

- From Larissa Johnson to Everyone:
  - Agree Hannah...

- From Nigora Erkaeva to Everyone:
  - Yes Hannah and it needs to be done not in our education but in our own thinking and actions too.

- From Will Parish to Host and Panelists:
  - Are you working with Gov Newsom in CA to inspire him with enviro literacy education?

- From Ian Kindle to Everyone:
  - Any suggestions for getting other states to follow WA's guidance in getting environmental opportunities for students included in the curriculum and standards? Seems like things have been headed the wrong direction in many states since No Child Left Behind.

- From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  - The Council of State Science Supervisors also shares emerging learning in all areas of science learning.

- From Maureen Ferry to Host and Panelists:
  - Better designed built environments which connect us to our surrounding nature!

- From Judy Braus (she, her) to Everyone:
WEBINARS: Bringing New Ideas and Innovation to the field of Environmental Education

- We will make sure everyone gets a copy of the chat so that you will get any resources that people are posting. Thanks for the great questions.

- From Gabi Esparza to Everyone:
  - Hello!
    - How will we educate students about the broken treaties with Indigenous Indian Americans who stewarded the before us? How can we give land back to them and reconcile?
    - How do we educate students about activism and grassroots movements?
    - What are we doing to create more accessible green and blue spaces for Black and Brown people without policing them?

- From Sarah Bodor (she/her) to Everyone:
  - I love that...Super Nationals!

- From Beck Pittman to Host and Panelists:
  - With retrofitting school buildings for earthquake safety, air filtration, lead pipes, etc., it seems like a great opportunity for school buildings to become even greener. Are there any plans in WA like this?

- From Elizabeth Schmitz to Everyone:
  - Thank you, Governor Inslee! Washington also recently began licensing outdoor preschools, which is an equity move in that it allows more families access to subsidized outdoor learning for our youngest learners. https://dcyf.wa.gov/news/dcyf-begins-licensing-outdoor-preschools

- From Elizabeth Soper to Everyone:
  - Climate Education is often left out of climate solutions. We need to find more ways to engage and expand Climate Education in other states and support the funding at state and federal levels. Folks may agree its important, but funding is often way below what it should be. How is WA funding this?

- From Emily Horton to Everyone:
  - Thank you Governor Inslee and thank you to all the educators and others on this call working to address the climate crisis in your unique ways and regions.

- From Jessica Mkitarian to Host and Panelists:
  - @Gabi Esparza yes +1

- From Anne Henderson to Everyone:
  - What do you suggest we do to motivate Governors in other, less climate friendly states to pay attention to this issue?

- From Elizabeth Crawford to Everyone:
AimHi is offering a climate change course for everyone now (https://www.aimhi.earth/climate-course) and UNESCO MGIEP has a course for MG educators and students that is asynchronous and free: https://mgiep.unesco.org/course-climate-change. I recommend both.

From Seaberry Nachbar to Everyone:
- Has your state made any effort to provide carbon offsets for state travel? I work for the Federal government and we are pushing our NOAA leadership to ensure that all Federal travel is offset or done remotely.

From Carter McBride to Everyone:
- The governor is speaking truth here.

From Jessica Mkitarian to Host and Panelists:
- Does Washington fund programs to get students who live in cities to outdoor spaces?

From Nicole Avendaño to Host and Panelists:
- I agree with you that outdoor schools are important and valuable. But being an environmentalist isn't just about spending time in the 'great outdoors'. Environment encompasses where we work, live, play. How are you ensuring that these lived experiences are put and maintained at the forefront of climate and environmental justice?

From Joni Roberts to Everyone:
- Thanks for sharing these courses, Elizabeth. I would like to share my free course: MOREcompassion for people and the planet, for advanced teens and adults of all ages. Free to everyone, everywhere! https://www.evolution.university/course/morecompassion

From Leah Higgins to Everyone:
- Considering the distribution of political and social power is not concentrated in k-12 students, what efforts can be taken at the state level to promote adult's climate literacy, and emotional connections to their particular ecosystem?

From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
- In terms of solution centered climate learning we need to resource educators eg www.stemteachingtools.org/brief/68

From Hannah Newell to Host and Panelists:
- How are you supporting public schools in connecting with community based organizations who have been filling in the gap of climate literacy for K-12?

From Kelley Le to Host and Panelists:
Hi All, I'm proud to share about my new book that Frank Niepold wrote the Foreword for as well =). Check it out - Teaching Climate Change Grades 6-12...

- From Kelley Le to Host and Panelists:
  - @Deb - Great seeing you again here =)! I can’t believe it’s been SO long since ECCLPs. Hope all is well!
- From Kim Vaughn to Everyone:
  - What is being done to educate rural residents, and adults?
- From SUVANKAR DEY to Host and Panelists:
  - Thank you, Governor Inslee. I'm Suvankar Dey from Kolkata, India. My question to you is that what are your views on Domestic Climate Laws and its modification in recent era?
- From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  - And we are GREATLY appreciative of the Governor and Washington legislators to provide state funding to support teacher learning

  o Frank - great question; Gov. Inslee - awesome idea to work with Governor’s Association
• From Maria Hart to Everyone:
  o If anyone is working in the workforce development space, please contact me info@embedclimate.com
• From Manuela Mejia to Everyone:
  o How are we promoting and supporting STEM/STEAM education work amongst our graduating higher education students that are underrepresented and haven't had the same exposure to experiences as well represented students? In other words, how are we promoting/supporting job market equity when previous experiences are not equal?
• From Carter McBride to Everyone:
  o Heard that Dr. Kwauk.
• From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  o Yes you do!
• From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  o Structural change.
• From Beck Pittman to Host and Panelists:
  o Thank you Dr. Kwauk!
• From Deb Morrison to Everyone:

  o Lrya Colorado’s Climaterium project (funded by Gates Family Foundation) is working in the workforce Development realm piloting work in SW Colorado https://www.lyracolorado.org/c3en
• From Nayiri Haroutunian to Everyone:
  o If you’re interested in how to guide and support K-12 students to take environmental action in their school communities in Washington state, please check out www.earthgenwa.org. As Program Director, I’m happy to answer any questions or address any inquiries on how we engage and prepare youth to be the next generation of leaders in climate change and social injustice.
From Sarah Bodor (she/her) to Everyone:
  o Thank you so much, Governor!!

From martha Brady to Everyone:
  o Thank you!

From Joni Roberts to Everyone:
  o Thank you Governor!!

From Denise Buck to Everyone:
  o Thank you Governor!

From Laura Tyler to Host and Panelists:
  o Thank you!!

From Judy Braus (she, her) to Everyone:
  o Thank you!!

From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  o Thanks Nayiri!

From Janice Elvidge to Everyone:
  o Thank You!

From Lara Tukarski to Everyone:
  o Thank you!

From Jessica Monaghan to Host and Panelists:
  o Hosting a free online conference on Water for anyone interested in presenting or attending- We welcome presentations from educators at all levels and contexts about the science and societal implications of changes in global and local water cycles as well as issues regarding equitable access to clean water. http://sencer.net/midatlantic/

From Kelley Le to Everyone:
  o We also have an Educators Call to Action PD series beginning November by the CA Science Project to launch the Educators Network for Climate and Environmental Action (ENCEA). Looking forward to connecting with more of you then to amplify our collective efforts - https://scienceproject.cfep.uci.edu/encea/

From Maria Hart to Everyone:
  o Thank you @Sarah Johnson!

From Judy Braus (she, her) to Everyone:
  o Great to see all the ideas and networking taking place in the chat! Thank you all!

From Carter McBride to Host and Panelists:
  o How do we impact systemic change. Not shift but change?

- From Jessica Monaghan to Host and Panelists:
  - Couldn't agree more Christina, thanks for naming that point.

- From Derek Hoshiko to Everyone:
  - +1 Christina Transform the reason for education!

- From Claudia Pineda Tibbs (they/them/elle) to Everyone:
  - Yes, Christina!!!!

- From Hannah Cooke to Everyone:
  - YESSS Christina! Target the structural and systemic issues!

- From Elizabeth Soper to Everyone:
  - agreed...let's do this right and address structural and systemic issues. We need to change the system.

- From Kelley Le to Everyone:
  - @Frank - Yes!!

- From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  - Www.aceframework.us

- From martha Brady to Everyone:
  - Agree with Frank. Very thoughtful.

- From Sarah Johnson to Everyone:
  - so so true Jose!

- From martha Brady to Everyone:
  - Need to look at the intersection of planetary health and economic justice.

- From Carter McBride to Host and Panelists:
  - Some of us are not so interested in the conversation of JDEI. Some of us, I, am more focused on process, procedures, and implementation. Infrastructures to execute not just conversation.

- From Ana Salgado to Host and Panelists:
  - What challenges have you faced when trying to connect underserved communities with outdoor spaces and how have you moved forward?

- From Anne Henderson to Everyone:
  - I think in the education field we tend to focus on fish when we need to look at what is up with the lake.

- From Krishna K. Roy to Host and Panelists:
Governor Inslee has an amazing understanding of inclusion and equity and his policies illustrate this.

From Manuela Mejia to Everyone:
- Going off of what Frank was just saying, we are fractured in conservation and climate strategies at an international level. In addition to this, it is also important to note that there are a lot of international strategies that do not take into consideration national/local practices that might better support sustainable conservation strategies. Being mindful of the downfalls of neoliberal conservation strategies is extremely important.

From Sarah Johnson to Everyone:
- EE practitioners and leaders need to be encouraged to be advocates for EE policy - yet so many practitioners work in the non-profit field and are not always encouraged (or allowed) to take an advocate role... yet it is a perceived understanding of non-profit rules vs actual... it's totally acceptable to advocate for EE policy.

From Sarah Bodor (she/her) to Everyone:
- +++Sarah!

From Ana Salgado to Host and Panelists:
- Yees Sarah!

From Sarah Bodor (she/her) to Everyone:
- Sarah :)

From Tyra Brown to Everyone:
- I am finding this conversation so valuable, thank you to the panelists! I'm curious to hear our panelists' thoughts and perspectives on how do we reach people who are not in the educational system (whether it be teachers, students K-12 through higher ed). How do we create equity in climate literacy for those who have decision making power at the personal level, community level and beyond?

From Sarah Johnson to Everyone:
- :-(

From Priscilla Brotherton to Host and Panelists:
- Sarah!!

From Judy Braus (she, her) to Tyra Brown, Host and Panelists:
- Good question! Thanks! We hope to get to as many as possible! :-)

From Brian Keller Heger to Host and Panelists:
- Hi all. If you're an environmental education program provider or a teacher looking for opportunities for students, check out the CAELI Community-Based Partner Hub. The CAELI Community-Based Partner Hub connects environmental education program providers with the California K-12 school system. It's a great tool for teachers to identify experiential learning opportunities and increase access to the outdoors for all students! Find it here: https://caeli.greenguardians.com/

  - Please save the chat and make it available to the registrants. there is a lot of rich content here but can't follow it and focus on the speakers at the same time

- From Anne Umali, NAAEE (she/her) to Everyone:
  - Yes, we'll be sharing the chat notes with everyone, along w/ the recording.

- From David Blockstein to Host and Panelists:
  - thanks

- From Priscilla Brotherton to Everyone:
  - *Yes Sarah!!

- From Frank Niepold, NOAA Climate to Everyone:

- From susan zelenko to Host and Panelists:
  - Majora Carter describes it so well in her TEDTalk

- From Judy Braus (she, her) to Everyone:
  - Yes to understanding the root causes and the barriers and structural obstacles, Christina!

- From Carter McBride to Host and Panelists:
  - Folks need to know their history, address history and then figure out how to heal that systemic trauma on both sides of the equation.

- From Olivia Griset to Everyone:
  - Thank you Christina! This was very well explained and critical!

- From Claudia Pineda Tibbs (they/them/elle) to Everyone:
  - 💯

- From Kelley Le to Everyone:
  - @Christina - Thinking about science education/educators. This is why science alone isn't enough to addressing this intersectional crisis. Great points!

- From Gabi Esparza to Everyone:
  - @Jose, thank you so much for summarizing my questions so eloquently!
From Emily Horton to Everyone:
  o Relevant to Christina's reference to thinking about the systemic and historic nature of current injustices and inequities, is this webinar: "EPA Office of Environmental Justice: REDLINING AND THE CLIMATE CRISIS" https://naaee.org/eepropportunities/epa-office-environmental-justice. Also thanks so much for that great explanation, Christina!

From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  o Why are we even playing that game instead of lacrosse or another game?

From SUVANKAR DEY to Everyone:
  o Thank you Christina

From Larissa Johnson to Everyone:
  o The problem with this analogy is that not everyone wants to watch the game beyond the fence - some people want to read a book or something else....

From T'Noya Thompson to Host and Panelists:
  o Indeed

From Christina Guevara to Everyone:
  o Thank you Christina!

From Rainy Rau to Everyone:
  o So true Frank!

From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  o Thanks Emily...really amazing work in that office.

From Sarah Bodor (she/her) to Everyone:
  o This is so true. We are terrible with systems!

From Anne Henderson to Everyone:
  o Everglades is a good example of that

From Emily Horton to Everyone:
  o @Anne Henderson: would you mind elaborating on that?

From Elizabeth Schmitz to Everyone:
  o Yes! We need systems transformation and students who can think and problem solve at a systems level, with educators and administrators who can support them in doing that!

From Janice Elvidge to Everyone:
  o I think people understand systems, but in everyday life economics, politics and personal wealth/non-wealth get in the way. The question is how do we integrate systems thinking beyond the classroom or scientific project?

- From Nicole Avendaño to Everyone:
  - @Deb--yes! why aren't spectators a part of the game or refereeing the game?
    [https://belonging.berkeley.edu/sites/default/files/targeted_universalism_primer.pdf]

- From Anne Henderson to Everyone:
  - it is a case of not understanding the system - the Army corp made changes to the flow that is now one of the largest restoration in the world.

- From Laura Tucker to Everyone:
  - Effectively addressing the climate crisis is truly an all hands on deck issue. That is why it's paramount to include everyone in the solutions, so taking down barriers to inclusion is Job #1.

- From Emily Horton to Everyone:
  - Got you! Thank you, Anne.

- From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  - Laura.. all of society and all of government Han deck

- From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  - Hands

- From Derek Hoshiko to Everyone:
  - Humanity can handle systems, but patriarchy and white supremacy culture get in the way.

- From Elizabeth Crawford to Host and Panelists:
  - Children are natural born systems thinkers. We just do not do an effective job of aligning teaching and learning with their natural tendencies to understand complexities in the systems in which they are apart.

- From martha Brady to Everyone:
  - We need to teach our kids to be systems thinkers.

- From Elizabeth Crawford to Everyone:
  - Children are natural born systems thinkers. We just do not do an effective job of aligning teaching and learning with their natural tendencies to understand complexities in the systems in which they are apart.

- From Elizabeth Crawford to Everyone:
  - See [https://waterscenterst.org/]. They work with preschoolers on systems thinking.
• From Laura Tucker to Everyone:
  o @ Deb Morrison - absolutely! I miss you and learning with you!
• From Sean Lundblad to Everyone:
  o Frank mentioned unintended downstream consequences, but many of the systems that need to be dismantled and reconstructed more equitably are intentional and pretty effective at creating injustice.
• From Tracey Ritchie to Everyone:
  o Students can absolutely be systems thinkers! Our academic silos make that difficult however. But first, we need systems thinking teachers!
    This needs to be happening in pre-service and in-service teacher PD!
• From Maureen Ferry to Host and Panelists:
  o yes to systems thinking and interdisciplinary learning!
• From Olivia Griset to Everyone:
  o We hosted a really powerful youth and educator led statewide climate education summit over two weeks in Maine to build key recommendations to advance climate justice education in our state.
    Here is the Executive Summary if other states are interested...it’s built a lot of momentum!

  o This panel is amazing--highlighting so much important work going on,
    while challenging the status quo, and enthusiastically willing to work together! I’m impressed and uplifted!
• From Lara Tukarski to Everyone:
  o @OlivaGriset--thanks for sharing this!
• From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  o @laura thanks for the love
• From Hannah Cooke to Everyone:
  o @Derek YESSSSS
• From Emily Horton to Host and Panelists:
  o Thank you all so much for gifting us with your presence and words. I hear a lot of discussion of how the climate change crisis intersects with multiple areas of inequity and injustice. This requires addressing a broad range of systemic issues ranging from economic opportunities to sustainable and accessible food systems. What recommendations do you have tackling this in a holistic manner and what role does education have in this? For example, through multi-sectoral partnerships, through policy change, etc.

- From Deb Morrison to Everyone:
  - Hope is in shared, equitable collaboration towards real change in practice
- From Sarah Johnson to Everyone:
  - I’m curious how many people on this call are involved in their local/state/school board government etc.. I believe we are called to be political leaders and work to change things from within in addition to our vocation of being environmental educators.
- From Will Freund to Everyone:
  - I love that so many people have hope due the work being done with young people. However I feel that we need to put more emphasis on those already in power and making decisions. Young people do not have the power to make decisions, adults do. By the time young people are in places of power to make the decisions, it will already be too late.
- From Michelle Finchum to Everyone:
  - I was there too Frank!

- If we want teachers to do this work, we need to as a society value them... Their workload keeps increasing and their pay is embarrassing. I had to leave teaching because I felt like I couldn't make a difference any more

- From Sarah Johnson to Host and Panelists:
  - Sarah B: - RE Ashley James chat - maybe we need to offer training on “how” to take action politically... inspire and teach practitioners to engage... not that you have tons of extra time on your plate... :-) guessing you've already thought of this as well

- From Sarah Bodor (she/her) to Everyone:
  - @SarahJ--yes, I was thinking this too. Will be thinking about this and welcome more conversation about what would be most useful.

- From Hayley Salazar to Everyone:
  - YES! Frank, I teach AP Environmental Science in San Diego, and I have to be very careful to not overwhelm students with doom and gloom. The best solution that I've found is creating opportunities to take action. Whether it's a coastal cleanup, planting a campus garden, writing to legislators, or speaking up at a climate strike... it's the ACTION that students really need to envision hope.

- From Emily Horton to Everyone:
  - One thing I frequently grapple with and seek to understand, is how values, sociocultural influences (including media and peers), and life experiences intersect with educational initiatives. As an example, consider the current landscape surrounding covid and vaccination education efforts. That individual and relational component seems so critical to understand and incorporate into approach.

  -Regarding intersections — I had a conversation this week with someone who lives in a food desert. They described the solution not as more grocery stores, or local gardens — but a community center, which could provide childcare support while growing food literacy and gardening knowledge at the same time. The answer to local food access and local food systems, being centered in childcare! It was a very eye-opening perspective for me.
